Compare and contrast paragraph examples for 3rd grade

Teaching students to compare and contrast topics in literature is an important skill to focus on as early as kindergarten. Beginning in 2nd grade, we need to provide structured tools to write to an extended response prompt. Graphic Organizers, transition word lists, story frames, and step-by-step modeling are needed for successful writing to occur. The resources below will provide our students many strategies to structure this type of writing. Students will learn that writing a compare and contrast essay is a simply formula of gathering evidence, organizing that evidence into a logical format, and communicating what they have learned about the topics. Often, this skill gets pushed to the back burner. It is a lot easier to practice comparing and contrasting with things that take less time - like by using a Venn Diagram. However, teaching 3rd, 4th, and 5th grade students to compare and contrast topics within their writing is an important skill. Scaffolding student writing through sentence or paragraph frames and essay templates can minimize the frustration of students, save valuable time, and help your students become better writers. Providing structure helps focus your students. Below, find ideas for scaffolding so that your 3rd, 4th, and 5th grade students can be successful with comparing and contrasting in their writing - and eventually writing a compare and contrast essay!Students don't have to write an entire essay every time you want them to practice comparing and contrasting within their writing - they can practice this skill by simply writing a sentence that compares or contrasts two things. Providing students with sentence starters is a great way to ease them into using compare and contrast language in their writing. This is especially beneficial for your ELL and low language students, but ALL of your students will benefit from this strategy.1. _____ and _____ are different because _____. 2. _____ and _____ are alike because _____. 3. The most important difference between _____ and _____ is _____. 4. An important similarity between _____ and _____ is _____. 5. While _____ and _____ are alike because _____, they have different _____. After students have been successful at writing sentences that compare and contrast, expand to short paragraphs. Provide scaffolding similar to the sentence frames to help your 3rd grade, 4th grade, or 5th grade students be successful. Using scaffolding like this will not only help them with comparing and contrasting language, but will improve their overall writing as well. (You might find some of these other writing tips and ideas helpful.)1. _____ and _____ have many differences. The most important difference is _____. Another difference is _____. Finally, _____. 2. _____ and _____ are similar in many ways. For example, _____. Furthermore, they both _____. A final similarity is _____. 3. _____ and _____ are similar in some ways, but different in others. For example, they both _____. Despite this similarity, they are different because _____. This difference is important because _____. Writing an essay can be overwhelming. Teachers often try to support students by modeling good essay writing - which is an essential step. But having students go straight from having a compare and contrast essay modeled for them to writing their own independently can be a huge jump for some. They are going straight from "I do" to "You do." A scaffolded essay outline makes a good "we do" for upper elementary students. Provide students with a scaffolded template that clearly lays out the structure of a good compare and contrast essay. This helps students stay on topic and reminds them what a good compare and contrast essay should look like. Eventually, you will take this scaffolding away. Or, you can use the scaffolding to differentiate. Provide more scaffolding for students that needed, while students have a good grasp might only have topic students scaffolded for them - or maybe even no scaffolding at all.Download these reading passages with a compare and contrast activity for free and use it to today!
